AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

Affirmative action is a set of steps that employers use to promote equal employment opportunity and to eliminate discrimination. It includes expanded outreach, recruitment, mentoring, training, management development, and other programs designed to help employers hire, retain, and advance qualified workers from diverse backgrounds, including persons with disabilities.

The federal program is administered by the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) under authority of Executive Order 11246. Often, state or local governments impose similar requirements. Although construction contractors are not required to develop written affirmative action programs, the regulations enumerate the good faith steps construction contractors must take in order to increase the utilization of minorities and women in the skilled trades. Affirmative action regulations for construction contractors are found at 41 CFR 60-4.

OFCCP, under the Department of Labor, enforces:

- Executive Order 11246, as amended;
- Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended; and
- The affirmative action provisions (38 U.S.C. Section 4212) of the Vietnam Era Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, as amended.

Combining these laws together bans discrimination and requires federal contractors and subcontractors to take affirmative action to ensure that all individuals have an equal opportunity for employment, without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability or status as a Vietnam era or special disabled veteran.

Protected Classes

Protected classes are defined as but are not limited to: race, color, age, national origin, ancestry, creed, religion, sex, sexual or affectional orientation, gender identity or expression, familial status, disability (which does not interfere with job performance with reasonable accommodation), marital status, status as a Vietnam-era or special disabled veteran, past or present membership in the military service, unfavorable discharge from military service, citizenship status (with regard to employment), arrest record or conviction status, lawful source of income, status with regard to public assistance or housing, membership or activity in a local human rights commission, genetic testing, honesty testing, pregnancy or childbirth, use or non-use of any lawful products off the employer's premises during nonworking hours, or any other characteristic protected by law.
