3. POST PROJECT EVALUATION

Common Ground Food Co-op was able to drastically increase their emphasis, awareness and participation in the local arts with the financial support from the 2013 Urbana Public Arts Grant. At a visioning session held with Common Ground owners in late 2011, owners expressed hope that their Co-op would increase support and access to local artists. With the grant funding, their vision became a reality.

Common Ground utilized the Urbana Arts Grant funding to provide a high-quality and highly promoted local art space and experience to the community throughout 2013-2014. The funding from the grant made it possible for Common Ground to install a locking gallery box crafted by a local wood-worker which now protects all two-dimensional art in the gallery. The Arts Grant funds also enabled the Co-op to enhance the lighting in the gallery space by integrating energy efficient LED track lighting in the space. They did this by adding 12 feet of track lighting and seven LED heads above the gallery box which attractively illuminates exhibits and focuses guests' attention toward the art.

With funding from the Urbana Arts Grant, Common Ground was able to showcase and promote the works of five local artists and provide each artist and the community a professional and lively closing night celebration. Because the gallery is located in the highly utilized Flatlander Classroom inside of the Co-op, every installation was viewed by hundreds of people each month. With the funds from the Arts Grant, Common Ground produced and provided each artist with at least 100 promotional postcards which they could distribute. Common Ground also displayed the postcards next to the art in the gallery space. Artists and the community thoroughly enjoyed the closing night parties. Closing night attendance averaged around 50 guests per celebration. To make these parties special, Common Ground provided hors d'oeuvres such as cheese and fruit trays, chocolate, wine, and non-alcoholic drinks, and the artists provided the music to accompany their art and set the tone at each festive event.

Many staff hours were devoted to making this project a success and a program that Common Ground will continue to implement in the future. Their Education Coordinator spent 30 hours creating the artist application, advertising the Co-op's search for artists and processing applications. Three staff members then spent two hours choosing the five artists for the year. After the artists were chosen, the Co-op's Education Coordinator spent approximately 150 hours on tasks such as creating promotional postcards, creating Facebook events for each party, posting about each show on the Co-op's various social media outlets, publicizing the shows in their newsletter (which is viewed by over 4,500 readers), corresponding with each artist, and coordinating the closing parties. The closing night parties were so well attended that it became necessary for Common Ground to increase staff support at the final two parties.

Common Ground made a few changes to their 2014-2015 gallery season. They are opening a two month period to make room for a children's exhibit at the end of the season. They also have plans for their owners to serve on the artist judging panel in addition to staff. Common Ground is grateful for the opportunity to contribute to the success of emerging local artists. By integrating the arts into the urban environment, the Co-op engages the public with the arts on a daily basis.

Common Ground Food Co-op Art Gallery

The space functions as a high-traffic seating area as well as a classroom where classes (including cooking classes) take place multiple times a week.
